Introduction

Death of a Salesman is a seminal American play written by Arthur Miller in 1949. Widely regarded as one of the greatest works of 20th-century American drama, it explores themes of identity, illusion versus reality, the American Dream, and the societal pressures that influence individual lives. Through its complex characters and powerful narrative, Death of a Salesman invites audiences to reflect on the cost of success and the nature of personal fulfillment.

Background and Context

Arthur Miller and the Play's Origins

Arthur Miller, a prominent American playwright, crafted Death of a Salesman during the post-World War II era—a time marked by economic prosperity yet underlying societal disillusionment. The play was first performed on Broadway in 1949 and quickly garnered critical acclaim, winning the Pulitzer Prize for Drama and the Tony Award for Best Play. Miller drew inspiration from his own experiences and observations of American society, critique of capitalism, and the elusive nature of the American Dream.

The concept of the American Dream—the idea that anyone can achieve prosperity and success through hard work—serves as the backbone of the play. Miller questions whether this dream is attainable for all or if it sets individuals up for inevitable disappointment.
